2. In section 407 of the Indian Penal Code (hereinafter referred to as the said Code) for the words—

 - (b) in such case the wife shall be punishable as an abettor "shall be substituted.

 - (a) provided that in cases where the woman is an investigating party, she will be punishable as an abettor ".

ME-A-1

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Adultery has always been considered to be a very heinous crime in the East.

Malay Law took a very serious view of the offence and the punishment awarded was death. But the advent of Western ideas and culture has gone a long way to erode that rigour. As early as 1841, an Act was passed to modify and prohibit the punishment prescribed by the Muslim Law or Customary Law of the land. Section 1 of Act No. II of 1840, laid down—

"It is hereby enacted that whenever any person shall be convicted of the offence of adultery by any of the courts of this Indian Country within the territories subject to the Presidency of Bombay, such person shall be sentenced to fine or imprisonment or both, at the discretion of the court, and shall not be sentenced to any other punishment whatever, any law or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding."

Section 2 of the last edition of this Act stated—

"And it is hereby enacted, that no person shall be admitted to prosecute any woman for adultery other than the husband of such woman, and that no person shall be admitted to prosecute any woman for adultery other than the husband of the woman with whom such man is alleged to have committed adultery."

By this enactment the offence of adultery was reduced from a public and moral offence to an offence against the husband of the woman. The husband of the woman with whom adultery was committed was given the right of proceeding against either of the parties or to let them both go unpunished. The Act XIV of 1860 went a step further and exempted the women of any class whatsoever. This position may be justified only on the pretences that women are so weak and incapable of protecting themselves that they cannot bring justice against a wrong done to them. The position of the females in this country has now much improved and we cannot admit that position except in rare cases. It is therefore proposed that though the woman may not be equally guilty with the man, yet at least she may be punishable in such a degree, and it is provided by the proposed amendment in section 477, Indian Penal Code.

Similar is the case with section 489, Indian Penal Code. In this case there is no prohibition for punishing the woman as an abettor, but the main words of the section are such that it becomes very doubtful if she can be so punished. The words used in the section are "When ever before or after any offence," meaning thereby that the woman is abettor before and is no offence party in the commission. The question of being an abettor would not then arise. In this view of the section, it would also follow that if the woman is an instigating party then the abettors of the offence under the section would not be deemed to exist and there would be no "taking away" or "withdrawing away" and even the man would not be guilty of the offence. But this interpretation has not been accepted by the Judicial Committee. As early as 1860, it was held by the Madras High Court that "It is upon the law taking through the evidence and admissions presented from the woman and the accused and for some time refused to yield to her request". Kannammal v. R. H. C., p. 326.

In 1903 another case came up before a Division Bench of the Madras High Court, in which the man had been convicted to six months rigorous imprisonment and the woman to one month rigorous imprisonment. The learned Judge acquitted the woman. In their judgment they said—

"Whether a woman could be convicted of abetting the taking away of herself within the meaning of section 489, Indian Penal Code, we need not now decide, as that is not the offence charged against her, but we are of opinion that when a man is married, as in the case of 'enticing away' a woman under section 494, the woman must be guilty as an abettor".

According to the finding of the learned Judge, the woman could not be convicted as an abettor if the man was convicted of the offence. The question is whether she could be convicted of the offence if the man was acquitted. I dare say not. But there can be no case in which the man be acquitted. She may have instigated the act, might have been mainly responsible, still she is to go without any punishment.

This is very unjust and inequitable and has led to a great wrong to women. In the proposed amendment it ought to be introduced, and it is expected that by its passage, the offences of the type would be greatly reduced.

LEGAL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

The following Statement of the reasons which have moved His Excellency the Governor to enact the Madras District Municipalities and Local Boards (Amendment) Act, 1942, in exercise of the powers of the Provincial Legislature assigned by him under the Proclamation issued under section 84 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is published for general information:—

STATEMENT.

The cadres of the Provincial and Subordinate Medical Services include posts anchored, not only for Government institutions, but also for local board and municipal institutions. Under the existing law local bodies have the option of reserving these officers to Government service after giving three months' notice to the Surgeon-General. Such provisions reduce the number of posts in the Government cadres and may dislocate Government plans for the recruitment and maintenance of the cadres. It is therefore considered desirable to withdraw this option from local bodies. To give effect to this object a Bill amending the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1930, and the Madras Local Boards Act, 1925, was published for criticism and objections and suggestions were invited. After considering the objections received His Excellency the Governor has enacted the Madras District Municipalities and Local Boards (Amendment) Act, 1942. The Act has been given retrospective effect on and from the 23rd March 1941, as a rule prohibiting substantive appointments to vacancies in the Medical Service was issued on that date.
